Objectives

The goal of the workshop is to raise attendees' awareness on some strategic matters when building one's track record as an author of scientific peer reviewed journal articles. Ideally, attendees will gain a deeper understanding of (a) themselves as authors (what is my identity? What are my relative 'strengths'? What are my relative 'weaknesses?') and as co-authors (how to offer / manage each others' strengths and weaknesses in the collaboration processes? how to network and with whom?), of (b) the journal landscape (where should I submit?) and the publication process relevant to their field (how to handle the R&R process?), and (c) related trivia as identified by attendees as relevant for them to be discussed (e.g. on opportunity spotting, how to write a lot, ...).

Content & Method

The workshop combines the following content areas (to be expanded upon or cut as seen relevant by attendees):

- Building an identity as an author
- Opportunity spotting & handling pitfalls during data collection
- Handling co-authors (from supervisors to new co-authors to difficult co-authors)
- Where to submit
- Handling rejections and requests to R&R
- Building a strong pipeline (i.e., networking & how to write a lot)
- ... anything more that you'd like to see covered (or cut) – please let me know ...

Methods:

- Preparatory homework (keep a diary)
- Input – impulse presentations
- Best- (& worst-) practice experiences / examples
- Pitches & small presentations by participants
- Individual- and group work
- discussions
