Contents

Acknowledgements 9

1 Introduction 11

2 New Histories – Old Metaphor 29
  2.1 New Histories: Postmodernism, Literature, and the Study of History 29
  2.2 Old Metaphor: The Maritime Metaphor in Literature 46

3 Wavering Biographies: Remembering Individual Histories 63
  3.1 The Odd Discipline of Autobiography: Iris Murdoch’s The Sea, the Sea (1978) 69
  3.2 Life Course as a Ship’s Course: Candia McWilliam’s Delatantó Land (1994) 87
  3.3 Small Men at Big History: Graham Swift’s Last Orders (1996) and Ian McEwan’s On Chesil Beach (2007) 103
  3.4 Seaing through Biographies 121

4 Salvaging the Self: Narratives of Personal Trauma 131
  4.1 In Search of a Life Line: Yann Martel’s Life of Pi (2002) 138
  4.2 Plotting a Course in the Sea of Memory: John Banville’s The Sea (2005) 155
  4.3 Seaing through Trauma 167

5 Influential Sources: Discourses of Origin and the Politics of Power 173
  5.1 Historiographic Darwinism and Ark-ology: Julian Barnes’s A History of the World in 10 ½ Chapters (1989) 180
  5.2 His and Her Stories: Jeannette Winterson’s Lighthousekeeping (2004) and Doris Lessing’s The Cleft (2007) 200
  5.3 History in the Making: Barry Unsworth’s Sacred Hunger (1992) 219

6 Reclaiming the Drowned: Post/Colonial Histories 249
  6.1 Rewriting Insular Classics: J.M. Coetzee’s Foe (1986) and Marina Warner’s Indigo or Mapping the Waters (1992) 255
  6.2 The Sea is Slavery: Fred D’Aguiar’s Feeding the Ghosts (1997) 281
  6.4 Seaing through Post/Colonialism 317

7 Conclusion 323

List of Abbreviations 335

Works Cited 337

Index 359