

Liav Orgad specializes in comparative constitutional law, comparative immigration law, constitutional identity, citizenship theory, and multiculturalism. He holds LL.D. and LL.M. degrees from the Hebrew University (2011, 2005), an LL.M. degree from Columbia Law School (James Kent Scholar, 2007), and LL.B. and B.A. degrees from the IDC Herzliya (2003). Orgad held various visiting scholar positions at Harvard Law School, Columbia Law School, NYU School of Law, and the Roosevelt Academy, Utrecht University. He served on Israel's Advisory Committee on Immigration Policy and Israel's National Security Council and was a Fellow at the Jewish People Policy Institute.

In recent years, Orgad was awarded the Dan David Scholarship Prize for "outstanding postdoctoral students of contemporary philosophy" (2013), Fulbright (USIEF) Alumni Prize (2012), Eric Stein Prize for "best scholarly article" by the American Society for Comparative Law (2011), and Gorney Prize for "outstanding young scholars" by the Israeli Association of Public Law (2011). He has been granted Rothschild Fellowship, Fulbright Fellowship, Russell Sage Presidential Authority Award, ISEF Fellowship, E. David Fischman Scholarship, Volkswagen Foundation "Our Common Future Fellowship," and the Friedrich Naumann Stiftung Scholarship.

Orgad is currently a POINT Fellow at the Freie Universität Berlin working on a book, titled: Cultural Defense of Nations: A Liberal Theory of Majority Rights (Oxford University Press, under contract).