Types of Colleges in Germany

College = Cover Term for several different institutions

1. A full University offers study programs in basically all fields of study
2. Technical Universities are specialized in technical programs (e.g. engineering) but also offer other non-technical study programs
3. Art Schools specialize in art, music, architecture or theatre. Usually, they do not offer other study programs
4. Universities of Applied Sciences offer a wide range of programs and specialize in applied sciences.

Types of Colleges in Germany

Colleges, schools or universities can be

- state-run (e.g. Justus Liebig University, Phillips University Marburg, ...)
- private (e.g. Frankfurt Business School, ...)
- church-run or in church sponsorship

Curriculum

- In Bachelor, Master and some State Examination programs, classes are offered as part of modules
  - modules bundle together classes sharing a thematic and/or methodological approach.
  - modules usually consist of two or three different classes.
  - module contents, kinds of examinations and learning goals are codified.
- International students studying an entire program at Justus Liebig University must pay attention to module structures in order to successfully complete their studies.

Curriculum

- For each class, there is a pre-defined workload. The workload for a class is the sum of the hours of work spent for the respective class. It includes class participation and preparations for classes and examinations.
- 30 hours of work = 1 CP / ECTS point
- Credit points thus measure the quantitative workload students must spend for their classes.
- Additionally, for a successfully completed class, you will be awarded grades
- Grades measure the qualitative success of a class.

Curriculum

- Lectures
- Seminars
- Tutorials
- Exercise Courses
- Practical/Lab Training
- Field Trips
- Colloquium

Curriculum - Time

c.t. = cum tempore (with time),

i.e. 10 c.t. = 10:15 h

s.t. = sine tempore (without time)

i.e. 10 s.t. = 10:00 h

Example:

Lecture „Introduction to Business Studies“

Wednesdays 18 – 20 h

= 18.15 - 19.45 h

Curriculum – University Calendar

- German term: Elektronisches Vorlesungsverzeichnis (eVV)
- contains all classes offered at Justus Liebig University during a semester
- is divided by faculties and study subjects
- can be accessed online: <http://evv.uni-giessen.de>
- some lecturers offer additional electronic material for classes (e.g. presentations, texts, exercises, ...). Usually, the material is provided via Stud.IP: <https://studip.uni-giessen.de/studip/>
- in case Stud.IP is used in a class, the lecturer will announce it in the first session

Kommentar:

This course aims to discuss key ideas about how the contemporary idea of "Feminism" is present in the writings of racialized women. Through the historiography about Black Feminist writings and claims from the perspectives from Latin America, the Caribbean, Africa, US, UK and Asia. The topics will be around (1) conceptualizing race and gender; (2) the politics of affect; (3) ethical issues around the voice and agency of women of colour; and (4) activism involving both: the authors' biographies and the way political police: be designed with three moments: presentation of one or a group of authors, group work, and collective reflection upon the discussed topic. The short sessions will be mediated by the teacher, presented in a seminar format by the students with depth analysis and group discussions. All sessions will involve group exercises.
