2.1.3 Modern Foreign Languages and Language Teaching

05-ANG-LM-TEFL-3	Teaching Foreign Languages: Theories and Concepts		10 CP
Module	Teaching Foreign Languages: Theories and Concepts
Module code	05-ANG-LM-TEFL-3
Faculty/Department/Institute	Faculty 05/Department of English/Teaching
Associated degree course(s)/Semester taken	MA NFF, TEFL (major/ancillary) 1 st and 2 nd semesters; L2/L5, L3, 5 th and 6 th semesters
Module coordinator	Cf. German version
Prerequisites
Learning outcomes	At the end of the module students will be able to theoretically analyse and empirically represent the development of pupils' competences. They should be able to analyse specific difficulties in learning and express exemplary explanations as well as opportunities for support. Furthermore, they will be taught the basics and processes of professional learning. Students are familiarised with relevant forms of teaching a foreign language and Content and Language Integrated Learning, as well as their application through academically based planning, delivery and evaluation of lessons. In so doing, school-based and extracurricular fields of practice are taken into account and critically analysed (occupational field). Additionally, students learn about different current and historical models of imparting literature and deal with literary theoretical approaches and their significance for foreign language teaching. All sessions focus on imparting skills of presentation, moderation and mediation. This module also aims to develop competences in empirical language teaching research, in didactical research in the areas of literature, media and culture, in research of teaching (action research) and approaches to empirical education research. All module components are obligatory.

Prerequisites	05-ANG-LM-TEFL-3, 05-ANG-M-TEFL1Media
Learning outcomes	Students acquire deeper knowledge of textual-didactical theories, concepts and methods based on textual theory and cognitive psychology. In particular, students are aware of the communicative and cultural functions of texts and text genres (including literature) and of strategies for the comprehension and reception of oral and written text in the foreign language. Students are also familiar with media-didactical theories relating to various media and multi-modal texts and text environments, as well as how to deal with text combinations and diversity. Students can formulate text-didactical competence and learning objectives and produce suitable materials and text arrangements for the comprehension of foreign language text; furthermore, students are able to plan, initiate, evaluate and academically represent text comprehension processes.
Module content	Theoretical and methodological characteristics of text didactics on the basis of text theory; theories as well as didactical and methodological concepts in the development of textual competence relating to various textual genres, including literary, scientific analysis and representation of text comprehension and production processes; planning of foreign language text comprehension and production processes; creation of appropriate tasks and evaluation of foreign language text processes and products; creation of text and material combinations and associated competence tasks; development of text projects..

Prerequisites	Major: 05-ANG-LM-TEFL-3, 05-ANG-M-TEFL1-Media Ancillary: 05-ANG-LM-TEFL-3
Learning outcomes	Students acquire deeper insights into basic theories, concepts and methods of foreign language didactics within the fields of language, culture and media as well as selected referential academic fields. Students can formulate academic problems and reflect on the procedures for tackling them. Students are aware of the scope and limitations of selected qualitative-empirical and hermeneutical research methodologies, and can justify their application. Students acquire essential skills in the development of qualitative research design and in the implementation and discussion of their own easily understandable research projects. They also acquire knowledge in the theory and practice of action research and apply their knowledge in media-supported observation of teaching and learning situations in foreign language education and continuing education, usually in an English-speaking country. Students refine their skills in lesson planning for specific learning groups.
Module content	In-depth insights into essential theories and concepts of language, literature and media as well as cultural didactics and referential academic fields; training in the relevant methodology of qualitative-empirical research into language learning; didactic research within the areas of literature, media, culture as well as teaching research; evaluation of teaching and learning materials, pupils' texts and lesson records in line with defined didactic analysis criteria; discussion and development of academic research design for empirical language learning research and didactic research within the fields of literature, media and culture; implementation and discussion of individual research projects; essential knowledge of theories and practice of teaching research; media-supported observation of teaching and learning processes in line with criteria of action research; diagnostics; planning of different lesson types; training in didactical and methodological skills; insights into the teaching profession's institution-centred practical fields for education and continuing education in foreign languages.
