Handbook of Peace in Early Modern Europe

The development of European peace processes is as characteristic of early modernity as the ubiquity of military conflict: over 2,000 international or domestic peace treaties were concluded in this era. This handbook presents the most recent findings of international research on political and societal peace orders, peace concepts and practices, along with the cultures of peace in the early modern period.

Program:

Inken Schmidt-Voges: introduction

Horst Carl / Christoph Kampmann: chapter presentation on Historical Security Studies and Security of Peace

David Onnekink: comment

Hans-Jürgen Bömelburg: comment
