

PRESS NOTICE

From June 29th to July 23rd, 2021, it will take place the ONLINE Summer School “Building solidarity. Feminist and Anti-racist Practices in Higher Education”, organized by the Erasmus + BRIDGES project: Building Inclusive Societies: Diversifying Knowledge and Tackling Discrimination through Civil Society Participation in Universities.

Thanks to the alliances between the different universities and civil society organizations that make up BRIDGES, this Summer School proposes to its participants:

- To provide the tools to analyse the mechanisms and conditions of institutional inequality that are produced and reproduced within Higher Education.
- To explore and deepen our understanding of key theories, concepts and practices related to anti-racist and feminist struggles.
- To experiment with, and put into practice, pedagogical methods and strategies that challenge racism and discrimination within and outside the classroom.
- To promote participants' role as agents of change within Higher Education Institutions.

The methodologies used are based on Participatory Action Research and collaborative work, and will be facilitated by members of the BRIDGES project consortium, which include: Universitat Autònoma de Barcelona, Justus-Liebig-Universität Gießen, University of Brighton, Feminist Autonomous Center for Research, Sindillar / Sindihogar, an.ge.kommen e. V. and Za'atar.

The course will take place through synchronous online communication spaces and on other online asynchronous work platforms, where the participants will develop a group project with the accompaniment and guidance of members of the BRIDGES consortium. In addition, it will be requested to participate in a collective evaluation of the Summer School in order to receive feedback for future improved versions of the course. It has a workload of 75 hours (equivalent to 3 ECTS), distributed from Monday to Thursday, from 3:00 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. CET time. The vehicular language will be English, although translation support for other languages will be provided, if necessary.
